The avocado fruit is actually a berry. It has a large central seed, yellow-green flesh and a nearly black rubbery skin depending on variety. Selecting an avocado in the shop can be tricky. These tips should help you. If the avocado is firm, it will take about five days to ripen. You can quicken this process by sealing your avocado in a paper bag with a ripe banana.

The banana gives off ethylene gas which accelerates the ripening process. If you wish to preserve your avocado and slow the ripening, put it in the crisper of the refrigerator. A ripe avocado will keep for 2 to 3 days in the refrigerator. However, once it has been cut, it becomes very hard to keep avocados from turning brown. To prevent this, it is best to leave the seed in, squeeze some lemon or lime juice over the avocado. Then, cover it in plastic wrap and keep in the refrigerator for 1 to 2 days.

Enchanting Time in Korea

Why should you visit Korea? The following brief written by Andy Chow, a celebrity traveller, tells us why Seoul is his favourite city.

South Korea is a country often known for its separation from the north. It is however not its tumultuous history of destruction that defines this country. It is its wonderful mix of modernisation and long-valued tradition resulting in a diverse and dynamic culture which people remember it for. If you prefer to experience a cutting-edge holiday, look no further than capital city, Seoul. Filled with towers of commercial buildings, it positions itself as the world's leading megacity. Such a formidable skyline stands in stark contrast to the crumbling temples and smiling pagodas of southern ancient city Gyeongju, a millennial throwback to the days of the Emperors.

Seoul is the second largest metropolitan area in the world after Tokyo. Almost half of South Korea's population live in Seoul Greater Metropolitan Area, making it a central political, financial and cultural hub, attractive to Koreans as well as foreigners. 25 million people live in this city. It is an open-all-hours playground of galloping commerce, pierced with skyscrapers and a sheen of searing neon, Seoul is a feast for the senses - the ears are set ringing with a cacophony of piped K-pop or sounds erupting from underground karaoke rooms, the taste buds tingling by spicy barbecued beef or wriggling octopus tentacle. Come and experience Korea for yourself!

There is no such thing as a banana tree. The banana plant is actually a giant herb and the bananas are _____ berries. A herb is a plant _____ a fleshy, non-woody stem. (29) (30)

After the plant has bloomed and set seed, it dies down to the ground. This is not always true: sage, thyme _____ rosemary have woody stems. _____ the definition says, after (31) (32) flowering, the part of the herb above the ground dies. With bananas, this gives rise _____ (33)

a strange effect. After the stem dies, another one grows, slightly further along the root. Bananas are native to Malays and have been cultivated for 10,000 years. Wild bananas contain large stone seeds and a small amount _____ flesh. _____ are pollinated by bats. The (34) (35) banana in your local supermarket is a cultivated variety chosen by farmers _____ its (36) fleshy pulp and lack of seeds.

Domestication has produced plants that are sweet and tasty _____ they cannot (37) reproduce without human help. Almost every banana we eat has been propagated _____ (38) hand from a sucker of an existing plant whose genetic material has not changed in 100 centuries. As a result, bananas are extremely susceptible to disease. Some species have already succumbed to fungal infection.

The modern history of toothpaste began in 1892. That year, Dr. Washington

Sheffield of the USA invented the collapsible tube for storing toothpaste. Four years later in 1896, Colgate began making their own brand. The earliest known referrance to any mixture for cleaning teeth came from a 4th Century AD Egyptian manuscript. The ingredients included flowers that will be crushed together. Pricisly how this was used is unclear. However, it is known that the Greeks and Romans used some form of toothpaste.

(39)

(41)

(42)

(43)

Among the ingredients they used are animal bones and oyster shells. The history of toothpaste also shows that it was obtainable in 9th Century Persia. A musician named

(44)

(45)

Ziryab invented a mixture similar with toothpaste. However, it became very popular especially in Spain. To these day, it is still uncertain as to how these toothpastes were used. Some Native Americans used neem tree twigs as a toothbrush. Wether these twigs were used by the ancient Europeans is still undetermined.

(47)

Some historians maintain that the early toothpastes were rubbed on the teeth using cloth. During the 19th Century, tooth powders became popular in the UK. They were made from salt or chalk. In 1900, toothpaste consisting of hydrogen peroxide and baking soda started to be manufactured. However, it was not until the outbreak of World War I that Sheffield's invention became popular.

Bukit Batok's rat horror days are over. After hundreds of hours of monitoring the rat movement, twenty infra-red cameras deployed to track them at night and the clearing of vegetation, the Bukit Batok rat _____ seems to have been solved. Over 230 rats were killed in a hilly area near the Bukit Batok MRT station.

The Housing Development Board (HDB) started clearing the vegetation on the hill after the completion of rodent eradication. At the end of 2013, my 18-year-old daughter, Rika was poised between two worlds having just completed her final year of school and facing the challenge of starting at the University of Auckland. In the interim, she chose to fly over 11 500km to visit the city of her birth: Mumbai. Rika planned to spend her break visiting her ailing 80-year-old grandmother, Nana.

Our family migrated to New Zealand in 2000 when Rika was just five years old. We have returned to Mumbai three times since then but it had been four years since Rika had last seen Nana. Rika could not wait to see her Nana again.

Compared to the ease of Auckland where she now lives, the journey ahead was daunting- apart from flying alone, there would be the heat, pollution, language barriers and chaos of Mumbai to contend with. There would also be the hardship of leaving behind her iPhone, iPod and laptop. After her final school examination at the end of October, Rika left for the airport and boarded the plane for a seventeen-hour flight.

As Nana was too frail to wait at the airport, Rika was to be greeted by her Aunt Maria and her five cousins. Once they all arrived at Nana's home, Rika flew straight into her grandmother's arms for a long and endearing hug. She told me later that they celebrated Christmas and New Year together. As my mother loves having people and food around her, the holidays were spent laughing and cooking while sharing wisdom.

15

Although Rika tried to inject some small changes into her grandmother's rigid routine, she soon settled into Nana's daily life. She learnt to go with the flow and realised that her presence was everything that her grandmother needed. It was the first time Rika had come face-to-face with the loneliness and pain of old age.

20

"Mum, time is running out. You need to visit Nana soon," Rika would urge me.

Time flew by and soon it was time for Rika to return. I was prepared to see some changes in my child as I waited at the international arrival area. However, I was also full of anticipation, expectation and joy. In her absence, our home had been empty and quiet. After half an hour, Rika appeared. I could hardly recognise the young adult who walked through the gate! Gone was the teenager who grumbled about everything. Her face was calm and serene. I could tell she was grateful to be home and that some tiny part of her had been left behind in India. We hugged tightly and made our way home.

Later at home, Uditi, Rika's elder sister, casually mentioned Nana. Upon hearing Nana, quiet tears coursed down Rika's cheeks. Although she was home, Rika's mind was occupied by thoughts of the ailing grandmother she had left behind. She imagined her calling out to somebody. Often, there would be no one to answer that call. Just silence.

My mother is on the brink of becoming bedridden but her fiercely independent spirit tells her to persevere and continue to potter around her home. This summer proved that Rika was a strong person. In a foreign world devoid of technology and the usual luxuries, Rika focussed on the precious things in life and has come away with priceless memories.

Rika and Nana parted with hugs, tears, prayers and blessings. However, instead of pity or regret, she remembers the experience with gratitude.
